Vintage comments:

2018 was a rainy year, especially at the beginning and end of the growth season, giving rise to downy mildew in spring. The fruit maturation period was moderately rainy, causing a few isolated cases of botrytis towards the end of the harvest. Temperatures, on the other hand, fell within normal range, and the summer was hot. Due to the cool, rainy conditions in spring, which delayed budbreak and flowering, the harvest began a little later than usual.
